

THE AUSTRALIAN

Sunday, February 11, 2024 | Today's Paper | Mind Games

The number of Australians who want the government to provide more support to Ukraine is lifting

---

By JOE KELLY

NATIONAL AFFAIRS EDITOR

and NATIONAL AFFAIRS EDITOR

9:01PM FEBRUARY 11, 2024 •  NO COMMENTS

Nearly one in four Australians believes the government should do more to help Ukraine, with support for greater assistance rising by 7 percentage points since the middle of 2023 as the war nears its third year.

An SEC Newgate Mood of the Nation survey polled attitudes towards the conflict between February 1 and 5, finding that 82 per cent of respondents agreed that Russia should cease its invasion and exit Ukraine.

Russia invaded Ukraine on February 24, 2022, with the action igniting the largest land conflict in Europe since World War II and unleashing a major global economic shock marked by supply chain disruptions and spiralling inflation.

The Newgate survey showed that 62 per cent of Australians understood the war was a “significant contributor” to global inflation and more than half agreed that ending the conflict would assist in bringing inflation back under control.

The online poll of 1588 people indicated that 24 per cent of Australians believed the government should provide more support to Ukraine, rebounding to October 2022 levels, while 58 per cent believed that existing levels of support were appropriate.

However, 18 per cent of respondents said the government was providing too much assistance – a large increase on the 11 per cent who shared the same sentiment in October 2022.

Still, the results show a large increase in support for greater assistance to Ukraine since the June 2023 survey, which indicated that only 17 per cent of Australians held this view, and the November 2022 result, when only 18 per cent of respondents backed greater assistance.

Kateryna Argyrou, the co-chair of the Australian Federation of Ukrainian Organisations, told The Australian: “Our community is heartened to know an increasing number of Australians want the Albanese government to do more to support Ukraine.

“It’s clear that Australians are appalled by Russia’s actions and know what’s on the line in Ukraine, so they want the government to stay the course,” she said.

“We are grateful for all the government has done to date. But Ukraine still needs support to bring an end to the human suffering and win this fight.

“The ADF has many unused, unneeded, or retired capabilities which would be incredibly valuable to Ukrainians fighting on the front line.

“Australian support packages for Ukraine have become smaller and less frequent over the last two years. Australia was once the leading non-NATO contributor to Ukraine, but now ranks sixth after Japan, Sweden, Switzerland, Austria and South Korea.

“Australians have noticed, and want the government to do more.”

The appeal for the provision of more defence capabilities comes after the government formally declined a written request from Ukraine for Australia to donate its retired fleet of MRH-90 Taipan helicopters to assist the war effort – because the aircraft had already been disassembled and buried.

In September, the government announced the Taipans would not return to flying operations after one plunged into the ocean off the Whitsunday Islands on July 28, killing four Australians during the Talisman Sabre joint military exercises with the US.

Following the announcement, Defence worked Airbus Australia Pacific and NATO Helicopter Industries to harvest key spares from the fleet for the use of other NH90 operators. This work, which involves disassembly of the aircraft, commenced in October 2023.

The Newgate survey also showed majority support for increasing sanctions against Russia and providing Australia's retired and unneeded military equipment to Ukraine.

Asked whether respondents agreed with the proposition that "things will only get worse if aggressive countries are allowed to expand their borders by force", 76 per cent of respondents said they did.

JOE KELLY, NATIONAL AFFAIRS EDITOR

Joe Kelly is the National Affairs Editor. He joined The Australian in 2008 and since 2010 has worked in the parliamentary press gallery, most recently as Canberra Bureau chief.... Read more

Topics

Vladimir Putin / Russia-Ukraine War

TRENDING

Lawyers face 'legal version of Nemesis' over Wilkinson's Logie speech

By JANET ALBRECHTSEN, STEPHEN RICE

Boxer battle in Defence war with Marles

By BEN PACKHAM

Drums of war are beating, warns Abbott

By WILL GLASGOW

Green satanic mills: dirty price of a clean future

By AMANDA HODGE, DIAN SEPTIARI, MOROWALI, CENTRAL SULAWESI, AMANDA HODGE

Reports of Putin's death were

'Unhinged' Trump cheers NATO attack

By ANITA CHANG BEATTIE

exaggerated but did it matter?

By ALAN CULLISON

SPONSORED CONTENT

Don't forget your kids eyes, this Feb

An optometrist shares why a vision check should be on your radar this new school year

SPONSORED

How to stop your body from ageing

Ageing. It happens to us all but that doesn't make the process any easier, and no one wants to lose their independence

SPONSORED

